Telmat introduces Symcad II Master Tailor
May 27, 2011 (France)

TELMAT introduces SYMCAD II Master Tailor, a unique innovation in the measurement of the human body. SYMCAD II provides boutiques and chains of clothing stores with an easy to use automated system to measure the client's clothing size and help in providing measurements for tailor-made clothes.

The customer is welcomed into the cabin by an automated voice system that explains the procedure. Featuring an automatic body positioning control, SYMCAD II helps the person find the ideal position, and then automatically triggers the measurement process which is simple, autonomous and fun. SYMCAD II provides all essential elements about anthropomorphic characteristics within a pleasant environment.

Ultra-fast and accurate, it takes less than a minute for the equipment to start up. The cycle comprises of an automated calibration of the scope of measurement taking around 110 measurements within 30 seconds. Comfortable and fully preserving personal intimacy, SYMCAD II uses digital projection of structured white light, considered to be the safest body scanning technology, yet another unmatched functionality. It is also not affected by skin and underwear colour.

SYMCAD II is the latest unmatched 3D body digitizing technology for body measurements available in the market capable of capturing human subjects quickly enough, of reconstructing the complete set of 3D body data and automatically extracting body measurements and other information. All measurements are based on raw data from the subject, free of any data manipulation.

SYMCAD II's advanced features make it possible to provide clothing that is perfectly adapted to the person's morphology, without any need for alterations. Its automatic measurement techniques mean more privacy for the client. Shops can further adopt a morphological database that will help optimise stocks and customer loyalty. Clothing store chains can enjoy an identical measurement tool in all their all their outlets.

SYMCAD II helps provide tailor-made comfort and elegance at a ready-to-wear price!
